Brown Awarded Barlow Trophy

The Honors Convocation yesterday morning was highlighted by the presentation of the Barlow Trophy to William Brown, Midland mathematics major. The trophy is annually presented to the outstanding member of the senior class based on scholastic record and overall participation in campus activities. Robert Von Oeyen and Kathleen Karry were also nominees for the honor.

Brown has been the recipient of the Outstanding Freshman Chemistry Award, and the Outstanding Freshman Math award. He has been a member of Omicron Beta Kappa for two years, and has been president of Phi Sigma Pi, in addition to being listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

The President cups for outstanding scholastic achievement were also presented by President Robert Swanson to the Phi Omicron Sorority and Skinner House.

The Honors Convocation speaker was Mr. Ben D. Mills, vice-president of purchasing at the Ford Motor Corporation. He addressed the audience on "The Questions That Count."

Graduates Reveal Decisions

The Placement Office reports that it has compiled the post graduate plans of 82 of the 1966 graduates. The other 83 seniors have either not turned in their plans or have not yet made a decision.

So far, the largest percentage of graduates will begin their careers by teaching in both elementary and secondary levels. All but two who have signed contracts will teach in Michigan. The breakdown of the 41 graduates planning to teach shows that 22 will teach in elementary schools leaving 19 on the secondary level.

The next largest group contains those attending graduate school. Twenty-four will begin graduate studies with the majority attending either the University of Michigan or Michigan State University. Other schools which will see Alma graduates are University of Minnesota, Dartmouth College, Wayne State University, Washington State University, Universita per Stranieri in Perugia, Italy, Central Michigan University, Western Illinois University, Western Reserve University, Vanderbilt University and Miami University at Oxford, Ohio.

Two seniors plan to join the Peace Corps, one in Turkey, the other in Africa. Another will join VISTA's Rural Community Plan.

Four will enter the medical school, two at the U of M medical school, one at Michigan State's School of Veterinary Medicine and one at the School of Medical Technology in Riverside, Ontario.

Three have chosen to join the military. The Army, Naval Aviation Corps and the National Guard are the military branches represented.

Five will embark on a business career while three are planning to return for their teaching certificates next fall.

Wright Has Officers, New Government

The members of Wright Hall have elected officers for next year. They are: president, Dennis Carter, a sophomore from South Bend, Indiana; Mike Olson, a freshman from Escanaba; and Frank Seller, a sophomore from Santa Ana, California. Only Carter had opposition in the election, and he defeated Doug Sinclair for the president's position.

Wright will operate under a new dorm governmental system next year. Each of the nine clans will elect two members to take a seat on the dorm council, a clan president and a council representative. The council will then choose, from its ranks, seven men to head seven committees dealing with various aspects of dorm life. The rest of the committees' membership will be recruited from the individual clans, one man per corridor for each committee. The student R.A.'s will serve as advisors to the committees.

Choir Gives Concert

The Alma College A Cappella Choir, under the direction of Dr. Ernest Sullivan will present its annual Spring Concert this Sunday, June 5, at 3:00 p.m. in Dunning Memorial Chapel.

This concert is the choir's 28th performance this year, the second on campus, and climaxes a year which has included a music workshop with Dr. Leo Sowerby as guest conductor, The Intercollegiate Choir Festival, over 2,000 miles of travel, and the preparation of a record including the spring tour repertoire.

The concert will feature a wide range of choral music, from polyphonic style to spirituals and show tunes. Included will be Monteverdi's Christe, Adoramus Te, a hymn-tune setting of the "Twenty-third Psalm", the Kyrie and Credo from Randall Thompson's Mass of the Holy Spirit and a setting of the 98th Psalm by the contemporary German composer Hugo Distler which has best been described as "exciting".

Also featured in the concert will be the Alma Singers doing a group of madrigals, selections from "The Fantasticks" and a number dedicated to the graduating seniors.

Commencement Speech By Chrysler President

Lynn A. Townsend, president of Chrysler Corporation, will address more than 150 bachelor's degree candidates and their guests on Saturday, June 11, as Commencement exercises climax a week of graduation activities.

Opening the series of scheduled events will be Baccalaureate, Sunday at 11 a.m. in the chapel. From 12:15 to 1:30 p.m., seniors and guests will be attending a luncheon in the High Rider Room.

Following Baccalaureate at 3, the A Capella Choir will perform in the chapel under the direction of Dr. Ernest Sullivan.

Closing out the activities for Sunday, senior swing-out will begin at 9 p.m. in front of the chapel. From here the seniors march around the campus saying final farewells to the campus buildings.

Two events scheduled for next Friday are Commencement rehearsal at 6:15 p.m. in the chapel and the senior-faculty banquet at 7:15 p.m. in VanDusen Commons.

Commencement exercises are scheduled for 11 a.m. on the lawn in front of the chapel, with the Commencement procession forming at 10:30 a.m. in front of the library. The final activity on Saturday will be the 12:30 p.m. Commencement luncheon in VanDusen Commons.

Townsend, the principal speaker, was elected president of Chrysler on July 27, 1961, after a term as administrative vice-president of the Corporation beginning in December, 1960.

Townsend worked on Chrysler Corporation affairs for more than ten years as a member of the company's national accountants, Touche, Ross, Bailey and Smart. He became a partner in that firm in 1952.

In 1957 he joined Chrysler as comptroller and in 1958 was named group vice president-international operations with responsibility for all Chrysler Corporation activities outside the United States.

He was elected a member of Chrysler's Board of Directors in January, 1959, and has served on the Board's executive committee since it was established in July, 1961. He is also a member of the board's finance committee.

Born in Flint, he began his business career in the National City Bank of Evansville (Ill.) where he worked for a year and a half before enrolling in the University of Michigan from which he received his B.A. and Master of Business Administration degrees. Bucknell University conferred an honorary doctor of laws degree on him in 1965.

In 1941 he joined the accounting firm of Ernst and Ernst in Detroit and in 1944 he went into the Navy as a disbursing officer, serving on the aircraft carrier Hornet in the Pacific.

Townsend is vice president and a member of the board of directors of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, a director of the Economic Club of Detroit, a director of the United Foundation, and a director of the International Executive Service Corps.

Townsend has received numerous awards from business, professional, and academic groups. Among the most recent are the 1965 Communicator of the Year Award from the International Council of Industrial Editors, and the 1964 Michigan Brotherhood Award from the Detroit Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

In the Commencement program honorary degrees will be conferred upon Townsend, Charles See—Commencement—P. 2

Professors Leaving

Three more Alma College instructors are leaving this year to take positions elsewhere.

Dr. Musa Hussayni, professor of business administration, plans to serve for the next two years as an economic consultant and financial analyst to the Kuwait Fund for Arab Economic Development.

This fund was created three years ago by the Kuwaiti government for the purpose of extending long term economic loans to worthy projects in some 10 Arab countries in the Middle East and North Africa. It operates like a regional World Bank having assets of $280,000,000 with promises that in the event of need more money would be readily available.

Hussayni will have the duty of approving the economic feasibility of projects applying for loans. He will also be managing the investment portfolio of the fund. This would imply shifting the fund's resources among different world financial centers guided by two criteria: profitability and immunization of risk.

He said, "It will be of tremendous value to me because it will help me to examine at close range the economic situation in at least ten different Arab countries. On the basis of data gathered I might be able to prepare and publish a manuscript in the field of economic development in Arab countries."

This two year position is subject to renewal. Dr. Hussayni hopes that by the time he is finished he will be in a good position to revert to teaching in those areas which relate to international business, finance and economic development.

He and his family have enjoyed and benefited from their seven years' stay in Alma and at Alma College.

Dr. Charles Ping of the philosophy department will be assuming the position of Dean of the Faculty and Professor of Philosophy at Tusculum College in Greeneville, Tennessee next fall.

This is a small Presbyterian school founded in 1794 and located in the Eastern part of the Smoky Mountains. During the past year Tusculum has suddenly come to life under the direction of a new president. It is expanding from the present 550 students to 1,000 in the next few years.

Ping said, "It will be an exciting challenge in the sense that it is a college that is rapidly developing an academic program. It will therefore provide a unique opportunity to work in and model a liberal arts education in a church related college."

Mr. Harry Landis of the business administration department is retiring. He plans to spend summers at his cabin on Lake Charlevoix and to build in Central Florida where he and his wife will stay during the winter months. In between these two he will travel and spend his time doing small jobs around the house.

Taking over the editorship of a college newspaper is a little like remodeling an old building with a long tradition behind it—one must aim at a harmonious blend of the old and the new in reconditioning the structure.

Essentially, this symbolizes what we have tried to do in the editorial section of the almanian this year. In viewing the current structure of Alma College, we have attempted verbally to remodel the old edifice where we thought such reshaping to be called for. This has necessarily included efforts to remove those parts of the structure which we considered outmoded or superfluous.

But we have also sought to retain those aspects of the institution which are still relevant and useful. We have always aimed at fusing the functional parts of the old aesthetics with the necessary qualities of new designs in our revamping of the institutional structure of Alma College.

Similarly, we have endeavored to cover the events of the College year in keeping with both the important traditions of Alma and the newer trends in the academic world. Our purpose, then, has always been to alter the current status of Alma College only in ways which will result in a stronger and more current structural design resting on the old foundations.

To those who found our labors to have fulfilled these purposes during the current year, we offer our thanks for your compliments and encouragement.

To those who find our workmanship in some way deficient, we express our appreciation for your critical interest and we confidently recommend next year's model of the almanian under the editorship of Miss Jolly Conine.

With the beginning of the next school year, Miss Conine and her staff begin the process all over again, and we are certain that the new almanian will be superior to all those of previous years.

In turning over my position to the new editor, I wish to thank my advisor, staff members and all interested students who have worked with me on this year's paper. Also, speaking for the almanian, I extend best wishes for success in future years to all those graduating from Alma this spring and to everyone who will be returning to the College again next year.

The American Error

by Jolly Conine

Mr. Peabody of Peabody, Van Snoot, Moneybags and Make-more Inc. sat in the walnut paneled, Bigelow carpeted, Fifth Avenue office and scratched his distinguished head. He pushed a button on the inter-com and little secretary with just the right amount of make-up and of hem-line followed him, pushing the inter-office portable liquor cabinet. Peabody looked disturbed. Moneybags looked efficient. The secretary looked in the mirror. "I can't figure it out, Moneybags," said Peabody. "According to the report of our advertising agency we should be appealing to Americans. We've got the little lady standing next to our product, and we emphasized in the copy that we stand for luxury, affluence, and the American way. I just got hold of the sales chart of our overseas competitor. His sales are increasing at a geometric progression that could put us out of business."

Moneybags lifted his glass, twisted his brows into a worry, and tried to sound thoughtful. "It doesn't make sense, Peabody, their ads are horrible, have you seen them?" An unbusinesslike tear rolled down Peabody's cheek. The secretary tried to look sympathetic until she realized that her "Sunny-Day Make-up" wouldn't accommodate a sympathetic look.

"Their ads admit their product isn't luxurious, they almost admit it's homely. And it is Homely!" roared Peabody. "How could Americans fall for something like this?"

Just then Miss Humble, the corporation's "Sanitation Engineer", entered to tidy up the office. She knew what the men were talking about, and she could have tidied up their sales charts as well as their desks.

Miss Humble was sorry about the American economy. But she bought the foreign counterpart of her employer's product because it was genuinely aesthetic, and it lasted longer. Besides, she liked their ads.

Commitment to Excellence Lacking

(ACP)—The question to ponder at graduation and at the start of each new semester, says the UCLA Daily Bruin, is a difficult one: will those students now entering receive a better education than those who have graduated? Our joyless answer is—probably not.

Why? Because the University of California is still not a true University and because most students have not entered into the true educational process. The element missing from UCLA is a commitment to educational excellence. In its place is a commitment to efficiency, to an imposed "consensus" from above and to intellectual mediocrity.

The rhetoric of academic excellence is abundant, but where has the University's commitment been? It has been with football stadiums, recreation centers, federal grants and satisfying local nabobs. To top it all off, the University's most conspicuous failure will become apparent next September when the quarter system begins operation, without any major academic reform.

In pressing for the quarter system, the University stressed two advantages: financial savings and the chance for academic reform. In the interim, UCLA has forgotten the latter.

The blame must be shared by the administration and the Academic Senate. The administration failed to exercise the power it wields to push for reforms, and many faculty—particularly unimaginative department chairmen—simply juggled numbers and hours to come up with class lists. Students and faculty who have called for smaller classes, individual studies, innovations

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Did you put your reservations in for church Sunday? Or were you among the number who had to wait in line to worship God? Turning a church service into a convocation transforms the atmosphere of free worship to required attendance. Perhaps if this event had not been required, those who were there would have come for the purpose of worshipping God rather than fulfilling a graduation requirement. Perhaps if students had not looked on last Sunday's chapel service as a convocation they would have been able to perceive or feel the religious values in this jazz liturgy as the musicians intended us to. Instead many seemed to be listening to the liturgy in the same way that they listened the concert the previous evening—to be entertained, not worship God. We suggest in the future that either worship services not to be made convocations or if this must be done the college students have the maturity to realize the dual purpose and emphasize the attitude of worship.

Peterson, pastor of Northbrook Presbyterian Church in Southfield. Goals Proposed

At a dinner meeting last Tuesday evening, the Cultural Affairs Committee presented to the faculty a proposal to set up one convocation next year as a goals convocation.

The faculty will review it and take action on the proposal at a general meeting on Monday.

Basically, the committee wishes to make use of such a program to set up campus discussion on the various views of what are and should be the goals of the college.

Out of such discussion, the committee hopes to gain a sense of common goals for the Alma community or, at least, "a common perception of the diversified goals of its members," according to the specific recommendation presented to the faculty.

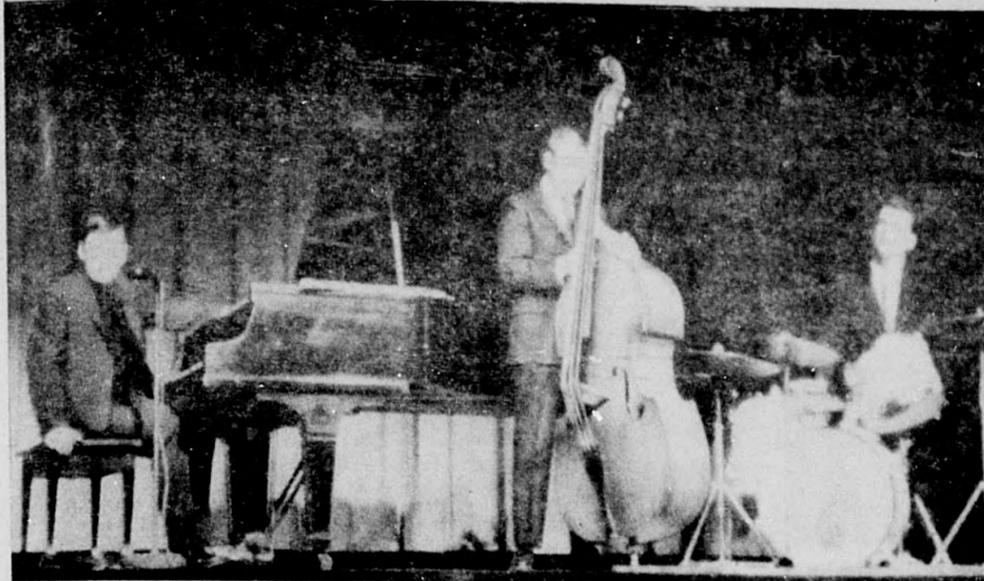

In its statement of purpose the Cultural Affairs Committee lists several additional aspects as auxiliary to the main objective of the convocation. Among these are a presentation of the college decision-making process, a discussion of the ways that communication, or lack of it, affects the college, and reflections on feelings regarding the aims of Alma. Other considerations are the means by which various understandings of the College aims affect the performances of students and the possibility of "community government".

Similar programs have been initiated on other campuses such as the University of Chicago, Antioch College, and Wesleyan College. However, the concept of discussing college goals within the context of community interaction and discussing in detail how they either implement or resist various groups is comparatively new.

MEA Sanctions Flint Schools

The Michigan Education Association announced in an open letter to the Michigan News Media that it has placed the school district of Flint, Michigan under state-wide sanctions due to conditions listed below. The letter stated, "We believe the teaching conditions and the school administrative atmosphere in the public school system of Flint are so unfavorable as to make this system an undesirable place in which to teach."

I-M Season

Closes Mon.

The Intramural program came to a close this Monday with the conclusion of the softball season. The softball season was extended two days; since a play-off had to be created to determine the winner in "C" League. Three teams; Softballs, Marauders and Friendly Farmers being the victors by scoring a 17-11 victory over the Softballs.

The final standings: "A" League: Sig Tau 5-1, TKE 4-2, Delt Sigs 2-4, Wright 1-5. "B" League standings: Delt Sigs 5-1, TKE 3-3, Sig Tau 0-6. "C" League standings: F. Farmers 6-2, Softballs 5-3, Marauders 4-3, Aces 0-6. Final standings for the All Sports Trophy: Tke, 190; Delt Sigs, 128½; Sig Taus, 127½; Mitchell, 75 points; Wright, 65 points; Faculty, 7½.

Among conditions found by investigations of both the M.E.A. and Flint Education Association are the following:

1. The Flint Board of Education has historically failed to voluntarily involve teachers in decision-making regarding either economic items affecting teachers, or teaching conditions.

2. The Flint Board of Education has allowed class size, on a large scale, to get far beyond the limits of basic teaching effectiveness.

3. Salaries for teachers have declined to a level placing Flint near the bottom of the fourteen Michigan communities of similar size.

4. In response to mediation, jointly called, and provided by the State Labor Mediation Board on Wednesday and Thursday, May 25-26, a four man committee of the board of education spent only 35 impatient minutes in turning over the mediators recommendations.

Did Alma Roar In The 20s?

Editor's note: The following article contains excerpts from a newspaper account of an Alma College Student Council meeting held on Monday, February 18, 1929. A committee was appointed to draw up rules concerning campus dancing and submitted its proposals.

It is recommended that:
1. Campus dancing be allowed at Alma College, not to exceed twice a month.

2. Campus dances shall be given only by the Student Council, through its delegated committees.

3. All regulations relative to time and place of campus dances shall be decided by the Student Council committee in consultation with the Dean of Women.

4. Rules of Action and Dress:
(a) Dancers shall at all times carry themselves with lady-like and gentlemanly manners.

(b) Such dances as the Waltz, One-step, Fox-trot, etc., are approved; but such dances as the "Shimmie" and other new dances are disapproved, and will not be tolerated.

(c) The power rests with the dance committee, the Student Council, or the Chaperones to call dancers to orderly conduct, and to punish them as the Student Council may direct.

(d) The Student Council discourages the wearing of extreme evening dress at campus dances.

5. The Student Council further recommends that college students refrain from dancing in public and semi-public places.

6. There shall be no group dances other than those given by the Student Council until further notice.

It is also recommended that the necessary permission from home be secured immediately if a dance is to be held on Friday, February 27.

in requirements and grading have generally been laughed off as visionaries or told the money is not available.

Let us sound both completely cynical and pessimistic, there are some bright spots, among them a moderate loosening of political regulations and increased awareness among students, a few outstanding departments and many outstanding professors, and some excellent programs, such as the Project Amigos, which have been developed by administration and students.

At the same time, it is incumbent upon students, especially new students, to become a part of the University. There is a great deal more to college than units, blue book exams and cramming. This system must be beaten and transcended. This means more than attending three lectures a week in four subjects, taking a mid-term or two and a final in each and collecting 12 units. It means reading outside assigned books; it means talking to professors not only when you want to complain about a grade; it means making known your gripes to the people who count; it means being a student in the widest sense of the word.

These three men form the Marvin Heroz Bavarian Band that played Tuesday for the German night put on by Saga Foods for the students and also greatly enjoyed by the faculty and their families. The Band provided music during the meal, adding to the dinner theme, and afterwards provided lively tunes for those who wished to polka. The completely German menu of marinated herring, sauerbraten, sweet/sour cabbage, whipped potatoes, apple strudel, was accompanied by root beer served in pitchers from a bar.
